A Note from the Community Office

At our October Community and Parent Advisory Council (CPAC) Meeting, we had another great turnout! We like to begin these meetings by having an activity or a topic which we can connect around. To continue with a topic the students and staff have been thinking about, I had the parents and community members do an activity that had them reflect on what conditions they need in order to thrive. We used the same 5 conditions that research shows, is essential for all of us – including our children -- to thrive. These five conditions are that we feel: safe, supported, engaged, challenged and healthy.

We talked briefly about what kids need in order to feel these things, and then we switched to what we need, as adults. Not surprisingly, the answers were quite similar. Here is some of what the parents and community members shared:

In order to be engaged (in the school), we need: connections to others and to the school and community, an invitation to participate, opportunities to meet staff, ways to be involved such as community events, having our voice be welcomed and feel like we have the chance to make an impact and, knowing our communion purpose or intention.

In order to feel safe, we need: to feel understood, to feel we belong, to feel physically safe, to feel at ease, to feel someone has your back and, to not feel judged but free to speak mind.

In order to feel supported, we need: a person or people who will listen to me, co-workers who have some of the same goals, time to work as a team, to have a genuine role to play, someone to lean on and seek advice from and, knowledge of what role each person plays and when they are available.

In order to feel challenged, we need: a range of ways to contribute so I can be myself and bring my strengths, an invitation to share my gifts and talents, an environment that values diversity because we see diversity there.

In order to feel healthy, we need: a balanced diet with good nutrition, a balanced life, with less stress and some play, a feeling of some empowerment and motivation, being supported with love, care, attention and time, being able to be myself, regardless of introvert or extravert, an atmosphere where I can be creative and imaginative, a feeling I have resilience and can face problems and solve them.

This is rich food for thought and we, as a staff, will reflect on these and think about how we are creating an atmosphere, not only for our students to feel safe, healthy, supported, engaged and challenged, but also one in which our families feel these things as well. These are universal needs and I think an over-arching theme to these responses, when we look at them as a whole, is that we need varied ways of being, so that we all – no matter who we are and where we come from – can thrive and feel welcomed and included in this community. This is important for us as a staff to consider, and for you, as community members and neighbours, to consider, as well, when thinking of those around you.

Together Strong, Gayle Beavil
